PERC WHITCOMB WINS MAYORALTY CAMPAIGN WITH CLEAN PLATFORM

Has Received Credit For Offering A Campaign That Appealed To The Co-Eds

"Percy the Elephant Tamer" was swept into office last Friday as mayor of Durham, as predicted in the campus poll conducted on the eve of the election. Riding on the wave of a "keep it clean" platform, Whitcomb emerged victorious over a field of four opponents. Last minute political mergers on the part of two of the candidates failed to halt the inward rush of votes for the man who could "tame the elephant", and still keep a clean campaign.

Popular with Co-Ed Votes

It is unofficially reported that "The Jumbo King" received more co-ed votes than has ever been cast for any former candidate. This is something he can be proud of, because the co-eds are very cautious when it comes to voting for a mayor. One was overheard saying, "Percy certainly was honorable, and it was a pleasure to be present at his soap box orations. By all means I gave him my vote and I can be truthful in saying that all my sorority sisters did the same."

"Perc" refused to disclose to the press the amount of money he invested in his campaign, but with all the samples that were handed out it is evident that he received substantial support from outside sources. If he had to purchase all the cigars, candy, and cigarettes that were literally flowing around the campus he must be flatter than the crust of a pancake. He has said that a lot of valuable time was used by himself and his three managers in collecting material for his platform. He only hopes that his marks don't take a sudden landslide, because not a book was opened during the four days that he was soliciting votes. If the profs decide to stick the eight ball under his nose he is going to remind them that the "Mayor of Durham" has considerable political power.

The grads and the student body were in an uproar when "The Elephant Tamer" put on his show during the half of

by Rachel Lovejoy

There are few men on this side of the ocean today who can say that they saw more action in the World War than did Major Donavon Swanton of our Military Science department. Major Swanton reached France early in 1917 as the commander of a machine gun company. He saw active duty then until August of 1919 when his division came home.

Major Swanton received his first taste of military training in grammar school in New York, his native city. All boys of seven or over enrolled there, were required to take the military course which was under the supervision of a U. S. army officer. Even though the gun was larger than he, young Donavon soon became interested in military tactics, and wished to continue his training after graduating from the Xavier high school. However, his mother had different ideas, wishing him to follow in his father's footsteps and become a lawyer.

After having spent one year at Fordham, he left to attend a preparatory or "Cram" school for military students at Annapolis, Maryland. Then in 1912 he entered West Point, where, due to the fact that integral and differential calculus proved a mystery to him, he found it necessary to remain for five years.

Sent to France

It was soon after graduating in April 1917, that he was dispatched to France. His division was just finishing its training at Burgundy and so was the one rush-

A send-off football rally—the last one for nine senior members of the squad—will be staged in the gymnasium Thursday night at 7 o'clock.

The rally will give the student body a final opportunity to express its faith in the splendid work of the team and to hail the closing game of an unprecedented season in University of New Hampshire football annals.

Those who will wear New Hampshire football uniforms for the last time in the Springfield game are: Capt. Ed Little, Charlie Karazia, Fritz Rosinski, James Conrad, Tom Giarla, John DuRie, Russ Martin, Wendell Martin and Alfred Montre.

SIDNEY FAY TO GIVE ARMISTICE DAY TALK

On Thursday evening, November 11th, Sydney B. Fay, Professor of History at Harvard and Radcliffe, will give an address entitled: "American Policy Towards Europe". The address will be given at a voluntary convocation at eight o'clock in Murkland hall auditorium.

He has studied at the University of Paris and the University of Berlin and in 1929 he was awarded an honorary degree at Smith College. He has held his present position at Harvard and Radcliffe since 1929, before which time he was teaching fellow at Harvard; professor of history at Dartmouth, 1902-14; and professor of European history at Smith College, 1914-29.

Professor Fay has written several articles in many leading periodicals on questions of international relations. He is also the author of: "A Syllabus of European History from 387-1900"; "Smith College Studies in History"; "Fueter's World History, 1850-1920"; "The Origins of the World War."

AMERICAN BALLET CARAVAN PERFORMS HERE FRIDAY NIGHT

Group of Young Dancers Have Varied and Colorful Repertoire of the Dance

The University Lectures and Concert Committee, together with the Association of Women Students and the Women's Physical Education Department, will present a performance of the Ballet Caravan on Friday, November 12, in the Men's Gymnasium. There is to be no admission charge, and the general public has been cordially invited.

Average Age of Twenty

The Ballet Caravan is an offshot of the American Ballet, comprised of about twenty dancers not one of them over the average age of twenty years. These dancers appear in a repertoire of new classic and character ballets by Americans. They spent the past summer barnstorming in the resorts with ballets of their own making. Their feature solo dancer is a sixteen year old girl, who studied for three years at the American School of Ballet and then joined the Caravan.

All the dances in their repertoire have been designed for the soloists who executed them and are never adaptations of past masterpieces invented for great artists who are no longer dancing. Both the spirit and the subjects of the ballet are filled with the contemporary attitude. This new attitude, though possibly unfamiliar to the older generation of theater-goers, turns out to be stimulating and refreshing. The company is limited as to scenery, but the desired affect is obtained by a very efficient lighting schedule, and a great variety of unusual costumes. Many of the dancers have been employed during the past opera season with the American Ballet of the Metropolitan Opera House.

Trained by Masters

The previous training of most of the Caravan's members has been under the direction of such masters as Fokine, Novikoff, and Kosloff, great masters of the ballet. A few have been trained in the modern dance under Mary Wigman, and Martha Graham.

The Caravan Ballet is under the direction of Lincoln Kirstein, a recognized authority on the ballet. He is not only a dancer and a director, but also collaborated with Romola Nijinski on her tragic biography of her husband, and won the honors in writing the "dance" which traces the art from primitive tribes to modern ballrooms. He is a graduate of Harvard.

The University is fortunate to be able to witness this ballet which has been esteemed by the leading critics as the foremost young ballet of the nation. Here, even the most uninitiated in the intricacies of the dance and the ballet, will find a generous amount of drama, brimming with rhythm and color.

ANNUAL STUNT NIGHT PRIZE WON BY SAE

Sigma Alpha Epsilon for the third consecutive year was the winner of the men's cup in the Annual Stunt Night program presented last Friday evening in the men's gymnasium. Alpha Chi Omega was the winner in the women's division.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon's program was called The West Comes East, and was a dramatic portrayal of the influence of western men on the history and development of the University of New Hampshire. Four scenes were presented depicting the arrivals of former president Fairchild and "Dad" Henderson, the inauguration of Dr. Engelhardt as ninth president of the University, and a scene from the St. Anselm game showing coaches Sauer and Justice.

Alpha Tau Omega took second place in the men's competition with Collegiate Review, a presentation of the various campus types, including the class grind, the typical Joe College, the typical co-ed, student in new library, typical Common's waiter and farces on the typical Tech and Liberal Arts student, the N. Y. A. laborer, and the Mil Art man. Especially applauded was the master of ceremonies, Bob Jones, with his ludicrous speech.

Matilda Tippet, the act given by the Alpha Chi Omega, won the cup for the best women's stunt. The act was a sham mayoralty campaign with Matilda Tippet as candidate. Tippy's platform met with the unanimous approval of the co-eds. The actors made several slams at the candidates in the last week's mayoralty campaign.

Phi Lambda Sigma won the second prize with their Swing Wedding. The act depicted a negro wedding in which the minister and participants sang and danced the hymnal ritual in "swing time."

IRC HOLDS DEBATE TOMORROW EVENING

On Wednesday evening, November 10, at 7:30, the International Relations club will hold a debate in the Commons Organization room on the subject: "Resolved: That the United States Should Effect an Economic Boycott Against Japanese Exports and Imports."

On the affirmative side, Mary Louise Stearns and Beatrice Fishman will be the main speakers, with George Edson handling the rebuttal. On the negative side, Gertrude Hayes and William Binder will speak, with Walter Dooley taking the rebuttal.

Because of the intense public interest which has arisen on this matter, a lively and informative debate and discussion period is anticipated.

Following the debate there will be an important business meeting when plans will be made for a "Vic" party on November 19, and for the lecture of Dr. Hubert Herring, whose appearance on campus on Monday, November 22, is being sponsored by the International Relations club in cooperation with the Committee on Lectures and Concerts.

Anyone interested in the subject under consideration in the debate, is cordially invited to attend the meeting.

NOTICE

Convocation for freshmen women will be held Wednesday in Murkland auditorium at 4 o'clock.

Mrs. Edric Holt will be the guest speaker.

1500 ALUMNI RETURN TO UNIVERSITY FOR HOMECOMING EVENTS

Annual Dinner at Commons, Football Game, Informal Tea, Features of the Day

Homecoming day this year proved to be one of the most successful of these annual events for several years. It was estimated that nearly 1500 graduates visited the campus Saturday to renew old acquaintances and meet new faculty members. Improvement on campus were also an added interest to all of the "old grads".

The annual dinner in the President's Dining hall at the Commons Saturday evening was attended by 60 class agents of the graduated classes. This group was welcomed by President Engelhardt and G. Donald Melville, '20, president of the Alumni association. The speaker for this dinner was Gordon B. Hall, class agent for Amherst's class of 1915 who spoke on "The Work of a Class Agent."

The main feature of the day for the "old grads" was the close football game attended by a record crowd of nearly six thousand spectators.

After the game, guests of the day were entertained at an informal tea where they met President and Mrs. Fred Engelhardt, and Coaches Sauer and Justice.

The annual dance in the Gymnasium climaxed the events of the day. Music was furnished by Bob Glynn and his orchestra.

"PRINCESS IDA" CAST HAS BEEN COMPLETED

The rehearsals for the Gilbert and Sullivan light opera "Princess Ida", to be presented December 8 and 9, are moving along with almost unbelievable smoothness and advancement, for this early stage of the production. Mrs. George White, director of the production comments: "I am amazed at the way the chorus, and particularly the principals, are going ahead and learning their parts." The principals already know all of their songs, and the chorus knows the words to the first act.

Seventh Opera in Series

"Princess Ida" was the seventh opera on which that great team of Gilbert and Sullivan collaborated. It is interesting to note that starting from the third opera they wrote, which was "Pinafore", the University of New Hampshire Gilbert and Sullivan Society have produced the rest in the order that they were written, up to "Princess Ida", with the exception of "Iolanthe". This includes "Pinafore" given in 1934, "Pirates of Penzance" 1935, and "Patience" given last year.

"Princess Ida" is styled by Gilbert as "a respectful perversion of Tennyson's 'Princess'." It is also an operative version of Gilbert's "Princess", produced at the Olympic Theatre fourteen years earlier. The characters are identical except for the omission of the porter, the only male inmate of the university.

The libretto of "Princess Ida" is written entirely in blank verse, often syllable lines.

An interesting coincidence was brought to light by the director, Mrs. White. It was during the original run of this work that illustrated programmes were installed. The production of this opera will mark the first time that librettos of any opera produced on campus will be sold.

America Steer Clear!

The nineteenth anniversary of the signing of the Armistice finds the world embroiled in the second part of the first World War—a continuation of the “peace settlement that was proclaimed in the name of ideals that stirred man's deepest emotions, but with the realistic intention to details of economic advantage distributed in proportion to physical power to create future disturbances.”

Italy, Germany, Portugal, The Moors, Japan and China are involved in the struggles on the Spanish Peninsula and in the Far East; Soviet Russia and France are not inactive on the Loyalist side.

Nations do not declare war any more; but there is no peace. They do not utilize immediately their whole military forces at one command; the new kind of struggle can continue along the present lines for many years barring internal economic and political upheavals. It will continue as long as the aggressor “have-nots” are shrewd enough to measure at just what point the peace-loving democracies will object to aggression with more than flaccid sanctions or moral condemnations, and make careful provision not to approach too near this point.

American people hate war! They all do. But they are divided in two general camps on the method of maintaining peace.

On the one hand, there are those who believe that we should cooperate with other nations to stop the aggressor nations in the world, today. This, by peaceful means. They believe that this country could not stay out of a European conflict. They agree that we are morally responsible in not aiding the victims of aggression.

On the other hand, there are some that believe we can't do anything toward the prevention of war in foreign countries. The main objective of this group is a firm foreign policy that will keep us out of war. They are favorable to international cooperation, but would shun political commitments.

* * *

We feel that America can achieve peace if it can achieve it at all—by a program consistent with the views of the latter group.

The United States has no quarrel with any world power. If we get into any war, it will be somebody else's; or it will be a war the cause for which has not yet been created.

We are not morally obligated to defend victims of aggression nor to help democracies—England and France—in their conflicts with the aggressor nations. Certainly we are not the protectors of the imperialistic rackets of two countries—even though they are peace-loving democracies—who find their colonial empires threatened by the aggressor nations of today.

This does not mean rigid isolation; international cooperation in the form of international conferences on reciprocal tariffs, on allocation of resources in laying a foundation for peace, on a disarmament program, on constructive measures of all kinds that may help to avoid depressions, and raise levels of living throughout the world, is a step toward building real peace.

* * *

Collective security is ineffective. There is no use going in for it just to tap Japan lightly on the wrist, or lecture to Italy and Germany on humanity. It was ineffective when Japan took Manchuria, when Germany rearmend and when it occupied the Rhineland, and when Italy took Ethiopia.

When a nation is bent upon military

LISTENING POST

by Donald Mendelson

It is an ironical fact that many countries, although they may have nothing in common with each other as far as political and economic ideals go, are nevertheless forced to band together through alliances in order to protect their nation from possible aggression. This was true of Russia and France in their treaty before the World War. Russia was a country which personified all that was autocratic and democratic. On the other hand France was the product of 20th Century Democracy. Each country's form of government was repugnant to the other, yet the mutual fear of Germany made such an alliance possible. The same holds true today with France and Russia again allies through an alliance, which though rather indefinite, is specifically aimed against Germany.

All the evils of the Alliance system before the World war are again present and the old struggle for the balance of power is threatening to bring about a war which will present destruction as it has never been accomplished before. Italy, Germany and Japan are rapidly becoming more cordial towards each other and are literally “saying it in alliances”. Of course there are many factors which cause the desire and the feeling of necessity for alliances. On the one hand is the desire to maintain the Status Quo, discourage all want for aggression, and to maintain the prevalent security. However, the opposing factions are desirous of regaining lost territory, prestige, national honor, proper share of colonial wealth and room for expanding population.

Thus, there is constant cause for conflict between “the have” and “the have not” countries. The questions arise as to what is the proper solution to the whole problem in order to prevent the start of a terrible war, which would dwarf into significance, all the terrorisms of past wars. It is my opinion, that Nations, even though dictatorial in nature, and exponents of either Communism, Fascism, or Democracy, can live in international harmony with each other as long as they do not try to interfere with each others' domestic affairs. The more warlike countries must be pacified as much

CLASSICAL CLUB

At the Classical Club's first meeting, held at the home of Associate Professor John S. Walsh last Wednesday evening, the following officers were elected for the coming year: president, Doris Johnson; vice-president, Thelma Marinell; secretary, Henry Bushway.

After the short business meeting, Professor Walsh gave a lantern slide lecture of scenes from Virgil's Aeneid.

THETA CHI LEADING INTRAMURAL SPORTS

Theta Chi defeated Theta Kappa Phi in a closely contested battle to win the intramural touch football finals. The final score was Theta Chi 7, Theta Kappa Phi 0. This victory puts Theta Chi in first place in the fraternity all point standing. The present standing of the first four fraternities in the all point listing is as follows:

Theta Chi, 149 points; Theta Kappa Phi, 140 points; Sigma Beta 131 1-3 points; Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 122 points.

This winds up the activities of the fraternities in fall sports, but they will not remain idle as bowling is to start

Mil-Art Ball Is One of Most Colorful Events of the Year

The annual Military Ball has long been one of the most colorful social high-points of the school year. As everyone knows, it is sponsored by the local chapter, F Co. sixth Reg., of Scabbard and Blade, the national honorary military fraternity.

However, it was not always thus. Prior to 1928 the R. O. T. C. sponsored a Military Hop held in the armory. A description of the Ball, as found in an old Granite, follows:

“This Ball, which is exclusively a military affair is one of the season's greatest social events and numbers among its attendants, officers from the surrounding military and naval posts. For the occasation the armory is resplendent throughout with gaily-colored banners, which, contrasted with the khaki-clad guests, presents a very pleasing and colorful effect. During the Hop there is a competitive drill, the winners of which are presented with prize medals. A tea dance is also given in the Spring Term. At that time there is an exhibition of work by the military classes.”

In 1928 the Hop was sponsored for the first time by the local chapter of Scabbard and Blade. With this new sponsorship a few changes were made. Formerly, the Ball had been exclusively a military affair but in this year it was changed to a choice between formal evening dress or military uniforms. The competitive drill was also abolished.

With these changes the Ball became one of the year's most prominent social events and, rivaled only by the Winter Carnival Ball, has continued so to this year when Scabbard and Blade promises the most colorful Ball in the history of the University.

RECENT EVENTS

by George H. Edson

In Alton, Illinois, stands a small white shaft erected to the memory of Elijah Lovejoy, minister, newspaper editor and fighter in the antislavery cause, who one hundred years ago, Nov. 7, gave his life, as the monument proclaims, “in defense of the liberty of the press.”

Lovejoy died in the defense of the American tradition of freedom and equality of the common man. He has justly been described as “the first martyr for an American free press.” He was the editor of an abolitionist newspaper whose courageous voice spoke out against oppression, especially against the slave system of the period.

Lincoln, the Great Emancipator, called him the Great Abolitionist, and described his death “as the most important single event that ever happened in the new world.”

With the echoes of the shots which killed Lovejoy still ringing in the ears of the entire nation, Frederick Douglas, famous orator for the abolition of slavery, spoke the following words: “The white man's liberty has been marked out for the same grave as the black man's.”

Today, one hundred years later, we commemorate the death of the first fighter for the freedom of the press. How many men have died for the same purpose since then, no one knows. How many lives will be sacrificed in the future to insure a freedom of the press? Again, no one knows, but it seems certain that many courageous men and women will give their lives to perpetuate the ideal for which Lovejoy fought and died, for today the remark of Douglas seems to have become a stark reality, and it remains to be seen just how much we are willing to allow our freedom of expression curtailed.

OUTING CLUB WORKS ON MENDUM CABIN

A group of Blue Circle men of the Outing Club and several heelers spent Sunday working at the cabin at Mendum's pond. A supply of wood was chopped, several parts of the cabin were fixed and the road leading to the cabin repaired. After work some members enjoyed canoeing.

Late in the afternoon the rest of the Blue Circle arrived and initiation of members and a supper were held. Those initiated were Margaret Boyd '39, Eleanor Lee '39, Kenneth Donle '39, Stuart Marshall '40, Fred Winterbottom '40, and Karl Woodward '40.

aggression, there is no way to stop her save ability to defeat her by force of arms. America is not ready to join with any other powers to do this; they want an effective neutrality program.

Succinctly sketched here are some of the essentials of a firm foreign policy.

1. Embargo on shipment of munitions to foreign nations or warring groups.
2. License of shipment of all other goods of primary war use.
3. Refusal to make loans or float bonds for warring nations.
4. Keeping all American boats and citizens out of war zones.
5. The invocation of the following measures as soon as a conflict breaks out—not at the President's discretion..
6. Nationalization of munitions trade.
7. Passage of the anti-war profits bill so that a war tax with heavy schedules will do away with all profits.

CUBS DOWN KITTENS

Brown's undefeated freshmen were forced into the air in order to add a plucky Kitten eleven to their string of vanquished rivals. Everything that the Bear Cubs could offer in the way of a ground attack was effectively squelched by Lundy's yearlings, but the winners managed to complete enough passes to run up an 18-0 score.

One of the touchdowns came in the last two minutes of the first half, and the others were made in the third quarter, with 20 and 25 yard heaves accounting for all three. Brown was unable, however, to annex any of the extra points.

New Hampshire's best threat was made in the first few minutes of the game, when they forged through the heavy enemy line to within 20 yards of a score, only to have their attack fold up at this point.

Coach Lundholm had particular praise for the work of center Max Gowan, who was outstanding on both offense and defense. Jones and Martin, also merited commendation for their great games from the right end and right guard position.

WILDCATS DEFEAT TUFTS IN CLOSE GAME

Well, another week of our season has passed and only one more remains. For another week most of us sat on the bench again. However, with the score as close as it was there was little chance for us to get into the fray. It was a good thing that Russ Martin's toe was in good form as it resulted in the small margin of victory that was ours. The victory was a sweet one as it marked the successful end of the home games of ten of us. Too bad that an injury put a sad ending to the home career of Captain Eddie Little. However, he will probably be in shape for the next game at Springfield when he and the rest of the seniors will wind up their college careers.

As usual Tufts put up a hard fight, and were in the ball game the whole time. Those three points began to look large after the third period ended. Tufts may hate to lose a game to us but they don't hate to lose it any more than this place does.

And only one game to go and the season of 1937 will be history. Regardless of next week's outcome the season will be a success. However, don't worry about the game next week, as the team will be in there fighting and unless Springfield recruits Clint Frank and Larry Kelley, the Wildcats will bring home the Gymnasts' pelts.

The crowd at the game last Saturday was a pleasant surprise although the cheering was not as satisfactory as it was at St. Anselm. Perhaps the presence of the alumni who were unfamiliar with the cheers was the reason for the poor cheering, but it seems that the Grads could have made more noise than they did. It is up to the school to show that they are really behind the team now by accompanying them to Springfield, for the season's close. We expected that the school would be behind us just as they were before the St. Anselm game, especially after the display of spirit at the field last Monday. However, the showing of the rooting section Saturday was disappointing to say the least.

It is rumored about the campus that the student body is planning to charter a train to go to the game at Springfield. That would be one "swell" way to demonstrate the way this college is behind its team. The Springfield game is always a great contest as anyone who saw last year's tilt will testify. Springfield has not had the success this year that the Wildcats have, although they have played much harder competition than has New Hampshire. They too have a new deal coaching with Paul Stagg, the son of the famous Alonzo Stagg, oldest football coach in the country, at the helm. Springfield always has a well-drilled team and should put up a good game.

It was interesting to note in the papers Sunday morning, after the Tufts game, that New Hampshire received more publicity for defeating Tufts 3-0 than they have in all their decisive victories this year. It seems that if New Hampshire plays a Boston team they will get more and better publicity. Can you visualize a 3-0 victory over Bates warranting the first page of Boston Sports sections? By the way we wonder what changes will be made in the schedule next year. Rumor says that certain teams will be dropped and certain others will be added.

Since a tie was the best that Bowdoin could do against Maine the Wildcats were heard claiming the championship of Maine by virtue of the three victories over the Maine institutions played. By the way,

IMPORTANT MEETING OF PEP - CATS WED.

This Wednesday, there will be an important meeting of the Pep - Cats at seven o'clock at the Commons Trophy room. A definite set of rules will be discussed which will effect a reorganization of the group. It is felt that this is needed because of laxity in attending meetings.

The Pep - Cats have sent for their white sweaters which are expected to arrive this week. The work of this spirited club will be carried on throughout the year at the basketball games, baseball games, lacrosse games and perhaps track meets.

A few weeks ago The New Hampshire announced that the Pep - Cats intended to contact a number of newspapers to find out why this university has not received very much attention in their columns. After reconsidering this intention, it was decided that we are receiving as much publicity as any other college of our size. Frequently we have received write-ups in afternoon editions of the larger papers and as the library displays only morning editions, our mention in such papers escapes our attention.

MANY GRADS ATTEND
HOMECOMING DANCE

On Saturday, November the sixth, the Student Council held a Homecoming dance in the men's gymnasium. The dance was very well attended by many of the "Old Grads", who had an opportunity to meet the new coaches, and to renew their friendships with their classmates.

There were enough people there to make it possible for the band to go to the Springfield game on Saturday, November the thirteenth.

The music was supplied by Bob Glynn and his orchestra, and the chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Justice, Coach George Sauer, and Coach Carl Lundholm.

a game with Bowdoin would certainly be a "natural". Although Bowdoin looked good against us here during training camp, the team had hardly hit their stride then and would have given the Polar Bears from Brunswick a stiff battle at any other time of the season.

Several of the former Wildcat grid stars were back for the game and several spoke of the improved spirit and play of the team. Among those who returned were: Arnie Rogean, Harold Mountain, Mel Zais, Joe Nathanson, Herbie Merrill, Fred MacNamara, and several from an era before the memory of the "oldest citizen."

New Hampshire has won every game this year from the point of view of color. Our uniforms are more colorful and snappier than any of our opponents to date and our band has definitely walked off with all the honors at the games at which they have been present. And the New Hampshire cheering section has been the top in all instances with the possible exception of Saturday.

The winter seasons will soon be here and with them new sports teams and heroes. Don't forget that school spirit is reflected in other sports as well as in football. To be sure it is cold and unpleasant sometimes to stand out and watch a hockey game, but remember that the hockey team needs encouraging as much as any other outfit.

And a word in passing of congratulation to Lou Wyman and Jim Garvey for winning the school tennis doubles tournament and a word of praise to "Mayor" Percy Whitcomb and his partner Johnny Decker for putting up a good fight.

Martin Kicks Field Goal
From Tufts 20-yard Line
For Only Score of Game

Before the largest crowd ever assembled at Lewis stadium, a hard-hitting Wildcat team took the Tufts Jumbos into camp by a 3-0 score. This was the last home game of the current season.

During the entire first quarter, and part of the second, New Hampshire kept the ball deep in Tufts territory. The only tally of the game came early in the first period when Russ Martin neatly place-kicked the pigskin between the up-rights from the Tufts 20 yard line.

Tufts threatened to score late in the second period, when a series of passes thrown by Collier to Pearson and to Sheehan gave them a first down on the New Hampshire five yard marker. Here, however, the Wildcat line made a magnificent goal line stand and, on fourth down, a fumble by Abdu on the one yard line was recovered by the Sauermen. Karazia immediately punted to safer territory.

Tufts Kicks Off

To open the game, Tufts kicked off to the New Hampshire 26 yard line and Ed Preble returned the ball to the Jumbo 47. A Tufts penalty and rushes by Paul Horne netted New Hampshire a first down, and another was garnered a few plays later when a Horne to Giarla pass was completed on the Tufts 14 yard stripe. Tufts held for downs, and punted to the 42 yard line, where, after several attempts to gain had gone for naught, Karazia rushed the ball to the 32 yard stripe. Another pass, from Horne to Giarla was completed, placing the ball on the Tufts 19 yard line. Horne made three yards, and then Russ Martin calmly stepped back and place-kicked a field goal. The ball traveled over 30 yards in its flight.

Tufts chose to receive, and Karazia booted the ball to Collier on the Jumbo nine yard line. The shifty Medford quarterback ran it back to the 26 and on the next play was forced to kick. The Wildcats kept the ball deep in Tufts territory during the remainder of the first period, and the losers were forced to kick to safer ground repeatedly. Another field goal, this time from the 35 yard line, was attempted by Martin, but went wide of its mark.

Wildcats Recover Fumble

Late in the second quarter, Collier completed several passes to Dodwell, Sheehan, and Pearson, advancing the ball from midfield to a scoring position on the New Hampshire five yard line. "Chick" Justice's forward wall just wouldn't be moved, however, and the Wildcats took the ball on their own one yard line, after a costly fumble for Tufts by Abdu. A few plays later the quarter ended.

The blue and white clad boys invaded Jumbo territory many times in the third quarter, making several first downs.

Burt Mitchell got going in the fourth quarter, making a neat run from the Tufts' 35 yard line to the 20, where he was forced out of bounds by Chiros. This happened after Fritz Rosinski intercepted a Tufts pass on the 35 yard marker. Paul Horne carried to the 16 yard line just before the final whistle blew.

TAKING TUFTS

The entire student body as well as the team will miss those seniors who played their last home game Saturday. These ten boys and their undergraduate teammates constitute one of the most successful teams in the annals of the school. They all played great football throughout the year, and we're proud of them. Everybody up and let's give a rousing cheer for Jimmy Conrad, Johnny DuRie, Tom Giarla, Charlie Karazia, Russ Martin, Wendell "Bull" Martin, Al Montrone, Fritz Rosinski, Mac Verville, and last but definitely not least, Captain Eddie Little.

Tufts had quite a big team there. Zimman, the captain and tackle must have been away over the 200 pound mark, and you can be sure that all this weight was a tremendous factor in the game. Being outweighed is nothing new to the Wildcats, however, for they've run up against that sort of thing in most of the season's games, and we know how well they've made out in spite of this disadvantage. It takes more than brawn to win a football game.

Fritz Rosinski certainly ended his home-game career in a blaze of glory! He was a visitor in the Tufts backfield on frequent occasions, besides having a couple of pass interceptions to his credit. And did you see how well Ed Preble and Charlie Karazia booted that ball in the face of that strong wind? While we're on the subject, all of the seniors played bang-up games Saturday and left the grads and students alike with a fine impression of their ability.

Thank the Lord for Russ Martin's trusty toe! It might have been a different story if Russ had missed that field goal. Incidentally, Russ has had an excellent percentage in his place-kick attempts this year. He also made some fine kickoffs yesterday.

Springfield, whom the Wildcats meet next week, lost by a one touchdown margin to Northeastern Saturday. The Gymnasts have had rather a poor season this year but they are always to be counted on to put up a good fight against New Hampshire, so it should be quite a game.

That was a tough break for Ed Little getting hurt in the last home game of his career and not being able to play the whole four quarters. However, everybody is keenly aware of Ed's ability and of how valuable he has been to New Hampshire, even if he wasn't able to display his effectiveness against the Jumbos. Furthermore, we're sure that he will be his old self next week for the Springfield contest.

Foss Makes Futile Efforts

The only mentionable competition "The Jungle King" received during the campaign was from "Rolling Foss Gathers No Moss" who made his most desperate attempt at the last moment to overcome "The Jungle Terror". Foss had his capable manager—Dick Nellson—stationed above the doorway of Murkland hall on Election Day crooning and caressing the hurrying students to vote for Foss. It was Foss' last stand—a noble endeavor—but futile.

Works with Young

The duties of the General Staff during the few months immediately following the Armistice were: to get the troops home as quickly as ships were available; to repatriate the prisoners of war; to settle claims; to assist the Peace Conference with American Relief; and to investigate mandates. One of Major Swanton's jobs was to care for the French children who had been separated from their parents. For several months he took charge of the foundlings, with the result that in the end each child was restored to his own parents. During that time Major Swanton became much interested in children, especially those between the ages of 6 and 15. Since then he has always known all of the youngsters around the army posts, even though he knew no one else.

This intense liking for work among young folks no doubt led to his taking over the Boy Scout troop here in Durham.

Taught French at West Point

Of course his experiences in France gave Major Swanton a chance to improve his French. He had taken it in school, and it being one of his hobbies, he had been able to hold the top ranking place in his class at West Point. Due to his great improvement during the war, Swanton was called back to his Alma Mater in 1927 as an instructor of French. He remained there until 1931.

While on the faculty there he was very much interested in dramatics. He joined the club, composed of the faculty and ladies at the post, and each year took part in at least one of their three annual shows. He acted in "Tiger Rose" (the now popular Rose Marie), the "Butter and Egg Man", "The Queen's Husband", and several others. He usually played a character part in which he spoke with different accents.

Another of his hobbies is writing. Although he has never had time to write as much as he would like to, he has published several professional articles for professional magazines. Some day he hopes to be able to write something of length.

Polo is another of his personal enjoyments. He also appreciates good music. In his boyhood he used to neglect his studying to listen to the orchestra at the hotel in which he lived for several years with his widowed mother and sister.

Major Swanton came to our campus in 1934 from Fort Niagara, New York, where he had been stationed for about two years. While there he became greatly interested in the history of the Fort which has been held under three flags: the British, French, and American. He came here as an assistant professor of military science, and tactics, and teaches military history and law as well as tactics.

The badge which the Major wears is a silver star with an oakleaf cluster, signifying that he was cited twice during action with the American Expeditionary forces under Pershing. He was gassed at Vases in August 1918, and so certainly deserves all of his honors.
